Western Artists Roundup

Mission Statement:

As members of The Western Artists Roundup, we want to preserve the customs of both old and new, yesteryear and today. Depicting those that lived in the dug-out, the tepees, or slept under the stars; fought droughts, heat, flood, or freezing weather and survived in this wonderful place we call the American West. We are here to tell their stories of hard times and good times, staying true to all details that are cor-

The landscapes in the Texas Hill Country are dramatic rock bluffs, miles of land, blue-green mountains, rivers, wild life, cowboys, ranches and open county, which are enough to lure any artist out to capture it all in paintings. The Cowboy life has changed, but it is still alive and working in Texas. Moss paints the scenes he has known living all of his life in Texas. The faces, ranching traditions, and wide-open spaces invade his imagination. Moss's career has included football coach, high school principal, athletic director, horse trainer, and many other interests. Combining the two talents, cowboy artist and coaching, created a unique situation within itself. Growing up, he was always with a pencil in hand, sketching the West. Without formal training, he decided to acquire some watercolor supplies and a few "how to" books, and set out teaching himself the difficult medium of watercolor.

He has won several awards and art show. Some of these include The San Antonio Art League Spring Show, J.R. Mooney Debut in San Antonio and the Humble Art League in Humble, Texas. He has also been featured in Southern Living Magazine, Texas Monthly Magazine, and The Hill Country Magazine. After many years of successful coaching and public school career, Moss has now completed another lifelong dream of opening a gallery of Western art. The Gridiron Gallery, in Llano, Texas. His ambitions is to make the Gridiron Gallery one of the finest art galleries in Texas. He is now living the life of that great dream, an artist of the West. Jack was recently given the great honor of being inducted into the Texas Heroes Hall of Honor.

David Godfrey

David was raised on a family farm west of Lewisville, Texas, during the 1950's. As a young man, he was a working cowboy, shoed horses, and worked the steer-wrestling event in his rodeo days. His background and love of all things Western have brought accuracy and authenticity to his artwork.

Not one to embrace the pretentiousness of many in the art world, he lets his art speak for itself, hoping the viewer relates to the stories he paints. David and his wife, Donna live on their small ranch in Ellis County, where he trains horses and uses as a reference for his art.

Doug Prine

With a great deal of attention paid to authenticity, Doug Prine's paintings of the West, from early mountain men and natives to the modern cowboys and cowgirls, tell, in a way, his life story. Prine's first hand experience with different facets of frontier life contribute greatly to his work. He has worked as a cowhand, actor, historical re-enactor and rodeo performer. He served one year in Vietnam as a combat artist with the 199th Light Infantry.

After his time in the Army, he attended Kansas City Art Institute for a short period. He then worked as an illustrator for the government. He left in October 1975 to devote fulltime to his art. A recipient of many prestigious awards, his work hangs in private collections in almost every state and numerous foreign countries.

Bob Penny

Bob Penny has always felt that he was an artist—down deep he knew that someday he would paint. Life happened and after raising three wonderful sons and finishing a long successful career as a dental specialist, he came out of the proverbial desert and discovered a new passion.

It has been five years since he first picked up a paintbrush. His friends, and wonderful wife, were uncertain about his new endeavor. He had no previous experience but now that he has ribbons and medal adorning his easel, they have all become his biggest supporters. He is attracted to the subject of horses, cowboys and Native Americans, and Western experiences of all types. He truly enjoys creating visual stories of the individuals who lived, loved, and endured the early days out west.

Charlie Bullock

Charlie has spent time in San Miguel, Mexico, and then South Texas painting Mexican street scenes, ranch hands, and cowboys at work. During his 40 + years as an artist, he has lived in places like Sedona, AZ, Santa Fe, NM, Durango, CO, and Fredericksburg, TX. He associates himself with the western art themes that are so prominent in this part of the country.

“I have always been drawn to the history of the American West. I like painting most painting the strong characters of those who lived it. I paint early mountain men, working cowboys and Native Americans. As I paint I grow in knowledge of our great history.”

“I’ve traveled many roads to find myself as an artist, finally realizing that Texas is where it is. I’m proud to be the newest member of the Western Artists Roundup. This is a group of fine men bound by portraying the history of the American West.”
